What our customer said:

“ I’m a huge fan of the Laura Ashley style which is why I was delighted to find out that they also do kitchens. I was already in the early planning stages of redoing our kitchen, so when I visited my local Laura Ashley Kitchen Collection retailer I was immediately impressed and knew I wanted a Laura Ashley kitchen. It was the Laura Ashley name that made my final decision!

The choice of styles and colours available was fantastic and I had a hard time deciding on my preferred colour, eventually deciding on Skylon Grey which works really well with the rest of the décor. We have a town house and I wanted to go for a style that was classic but would suit our lifestyle too. We chose the Whitby range with oak handles and oak worktops as we were inspired by the images in the brochure and knew it would fit perfectly with the rest of the house.

We didn’t want everything out on show, so our kitchen designer incorporated lots of different ideas, such as the tall pull out larder unit and integrated appliances. It’s the little details that make the difference to this kitchen; things like the Laura Ashley name on the drawers and the hinge covers that you just can’t get from anywhere else, I also loved the Laura Ashley chopping board that came with the kitchen too!

I originally thought that a Laura Ashley kitchen would be out of my price range, but after we saw the quote we were both surprised and delighted to see that it was within our budget and was very reasonable. ”

What our customer said:

“ We were immediately impressed with Laura Ashley kitchens as soon as we saw them in the showroom; it was just the right look we wanted to go for. We loved the idea of a grey kitchen and liked the idea of mixing two tones.

Our designer talked to us about a boot room and showed us the different areas we could create with the furniture, which was perfect for our family. We created open shelving to store shoes and bags, and used the panelling to create loads of spaces to hang up coats. We also incorporated tall cabinets to store the items we don't need to hand which means we have loads of space and everything can be kept in one room.

When looking at the utility room, we knew we wanted a sink that was large enough so we could wash the dog after muddy walks which is why we went for a Belfast sink in here as well as in the main kitchen. Again we used tall cabinets to hide away things like the ironing board, and lots of cabinets give us plenty of storage to store cleaning products and other things out of the way of the children.

We knew we had a large space to work with which is why we've used colours to create different areas in the kitchen. The island has lots of deep drawers to store all our pans, kitchen utensils and items for cooking, which means they are all to hand when we cook. Having everything to hand, and in its place is the main reason why we went for the large walk-in pantry; it offers so much storage space!

When we were in initial planning stages of the kitchen project, I researched my preferred styles and choices using Pinterest and lots of different magazines, as they gave me plenty of ideas. ”

What our customer said:

“ We'd looked at lots of different kitchens styles until we found one that was right for our family. We were wanting an open-plan kitchen that would be hard-wearing enough to cope with two small boys, and a dog, but would offer the traditional country look that we were after.

The main feature of the kitchen is definitely the island, it has tonnes of storage and we're always getting compliments on the wine rack too! It's the perfect place to sit and have a quick breakfast and the integral chopping board is an ideal prep area for cooking. We like to think of it as a 'party kitchen' as we have lots of space and love having our friends and family over.

When we saw the Harwood range from Laura Ashley kitchens, we knew it was the one for us. We wanted something quite neutral in terms of colour so we could add splashes of colour with our decoration. They had lots of feature units available, like the glass-front cabinets and open shelving, and as well as offering lots of extra storage. It also fits our traditional country theme perfectly!

The Laura Ashley name was the icing on the cake really. We knew we were going to get a high quality kitchen as soon as we saw it! ”
